

Preliminary Steps to Make your Research Paper Writing Easy

A research paper is written to provide a detailed analysis of the given topic. For this, you need to conduct detailed research about the topic from multiple dimensions. The most hectic task in this process is the literature review.

Many students are afraid of writing research papers by themselves, so they end up hiring an essay writing service to do it for them. This is mostly because of the lengthy research that is required to write a research paper.

Some preliminary steps can make research easier and simpler for you. These steps are described below:

- Understand the Requirements of the Paper

There is a set of requirements that define the scope, format, etc., of a research paper. These requirements could be mentioned by your instructor or by a journal for whom you are writing the essay writer service.

In either case, you need to ensure the following:

- Read the instructions multiple times and ask if there is any confusion in any of the requirements.
- Understand the scope and main purpose of the paper.
- Pay attention to the technical details like word count, page count, formatting, citation styles, etc., and note them down.
- Define a timeframe and set the milestones accordingly.

- Identify the Target Audience

It is very important to identify the target audience of your paper. This is because your vocabulary, scope, and the extent of information written in the paper are all determined by the audience.

For instance, if the target audience comprises field experts, they'll be interested to read more essay writer website. On the other hand, if the target audience comprises the amateur audience, you will have to keep the scope limited and language easy.

- Choose the Right Topic for your Paper

Brainstorm ideas and research on the internet to find interesting topics and working areas. The key is to find a topic that is both interesting for you to write and the audience to read. Here are some defining factors in choosing a topic:

- Suits your field of study
- Should be the latest issue or finding in your field. Don't take outdated topics.
- Shouldn't be too broad or too narrow.

- Fulfills the requirements of the paper.
- Try to think of something that is unique and fresh, instead of being monotonous and boring.

You can come up with such a topic yourself or by reading the relevant literature.

- Thoroughly Research the Topic

Once you have selected the topic, then you need to start researching it. The research can be conducted online through reading articles and other papers. You can also use books, magazines, or the relevant literature provided in your library.

Here are some of the main research questions you need to address through your research:

- Have the previous researchers left any gap in their findings of the essay writing service?
- What are the new developments in the topic?
- What are the current debates about the topic you have chosen? Can you participate or contribute to them using your paper?
- How are you going to address the research gap you identified?
- What new can you offer to the topic or your field of study?

- Prepare the Research Paper Proposal

A research proposal is a document that briefly describes the main sections of your paper. It is written to highlight the significance of the paper. It tells the main research that you are going to conduct and the research problem that you will address.

A research proposal has the following sections:

1. Title Page
2. Table of Contents
3. Abstract
4. Introduction
5. Background
6. Literature Review
7. Research Design and Methodology
8. Discussion
9. Conclusion

10. Citations
